This is now my second stint on Folk Camps Council and I am still enjoying working through the details to help provide a calendar of interesting and enjoyable camps. Although I now have significant experience of the running of camps, I am open to new ideas and encourage everyone to think about and challenge what we are doing. We only keep the society going because people have a keen interest in how things work and offer their time to make up a strong and varied Council team.

As a life-long Folk Camper, I am happy to help to keep the holidays going that I enjoy so much. I have worked in education, health and industry, in the public and private sector, both at and away from a desk. I would say that I most enjoy working directly with people and would be willing to help wherever is necessary. I feel strongly about all aspects of Folk Camping; singing, dancing and playing, marquees and halls, in the UK and abroad. I hope that we continue to strive to be inclusive, open to new ideas and work together to build a better holiday.
